

Upcoming Infrastructure Projects in Argentina Webinar

Thursday, April 26, 2018 1PM EST

Following more than a decade of neglect, the current Government of Argentina – backed by investments from the World Bank and the InterAmerican Development Bank – is planning a massive upgrade of Argentina’s infrastructure and wants to attract U.S. construction, engineering and technology companies to bid on upcoming tenders.

President Macri’s election at the end of 2015 marked a massive shift in Argentine economic policy. The Argentine government is reforming and opening the economy to the world. GDP growth is up and poverty rates are down. Investors are returning. U.S. agencies such as ExIm Bank, USTDA and OPIC have re-entered the market. The Macri Administration is integrating Argentina back into the world economy, investing in infrastructure and cracking down on corruption.

THE OPPORTUNITY

Projects incorporated into the 3-year transportation public works plan (estimated to value over $33 billion) include significant cargo and passenger rail upgrades; addition of over 1,700 miles to the national highway system; and significant subway, tunnel, and port upgrades.

The World Bank has committed $6.6 billion for 22 investment projects in Argentina.

The Government of Argentina has $21 billion worth of projects to be financed through Public-Private-Partnership. These include highways, cargo rail, electric transmission, hospitals, prisons and more.

Join the U.S. Department of Commerce Trade Americas and Infrastructure Global Teams for a Webinar to learn more about these opportunities and how to be part of any of the upcoming infrastructure projects in Argentina.
