Course Description

Our justice system is beginning to implement responses to social deviance that are more humane, efficient and effective. Evaluating metrics of public safety, environmental impact, economic factors, preparedness for unplanned events, and restorative justice principles can increase long-term success. The Restorative Justice Visioning Event will demonstrate how to pursue objectives that best support sustainable, resilient communities and maximize the potential of individuals.

This event will seek input from organizations such as Miami-Dade County project administration; local government leadership; emergency response service agencies; environmental specialists; representatives from the Sea Level Rise Task Force; AIA Disaster Assistance Task Force, community interest groups; urban planners, national justice design experts; and restorative justice advocates including our Friday breakfast plenary partner, DreamCorps.

The Visioning Event program is presented in three parts and is intended to be cumulative, although attendees are welcome to attend any/all sessions.

Learning Objectives – Part 2

- Personally experience a public participatory process that unites stakeholders' interests in envisioning a sustainable and resilient justice project.
- Learn how to execute your own dialogue for best practices of holistic planning and design that broadly engages community perspectives.
- Identify the processes required to engage Stakeholder input and define metrics and measures of a successful project.
- Participate in an engaging dialogue with community leadership as project components are evaluated with community needs and long-term sustainability.
