Get the most out of A'19 for your small firm

The Small Firm Exchange has curated a lineup of workshops, seminars, and events most relevant to small firm leaders at this year's AIA Conference on Architecture. This collection of education and networking opportunities is tailored to help small firms—to address challenges with technology, contracts, sustainability, residential claims, management demands—and your future. Join us in Las Vegas, June 5–8.

Small firm stories: The SFx podcast

The Small Firm Exchange podcast supported by the Small Project Design KC and the Young Architect's Forum is a storytelling project that captures conversations between architects in all stages of their careers. To open our conversation about Small Firms we have two former SFx Chairs discussing how to overcome some of the challenges of starting a firm and running it transparently.

Small firm architect spotlight: Elizabeth Camargo, AIA

By Jason Tapia, AIA

Highlighting the successes of small firm architects continues to be a priority for the Small Firm Exchange. In 2018 the SFx conducted interviews with small firm architects and each quarter of 2019 the SFx Scan will include one of their stories. This quarter features an interview with Elizabeth Camargo, AIA.

Calling small firm sustainability champions to join a peer network

By Jason Hainline, AIA

I've long been envious of the sustainable design leaders peer network that's available to those in larger firms. If you are feeling alone driving sustainability in a small firm, I invite you to come join us in our own peer network.

Get ahead of cyber risk

by the AIA Trust

Architecture firms of all sizes are seeing an increase in cyber-attacks both in terms of frequency and intensity. From hackers taking control of your servers, to liability arising from lost data—your firm is at risk. Architects can now develop a robust risk management procedure for their firm.
